

Rural Health Clubs

Below is an overview of each rural health club. Click on the logo to visit their webpage.

BUSHFIRE (Bond University Society of Health for Indigenous and Rural Experience) serving Bond University, is a student-led club that aims to provide students opportunities to gain exposure to rural & Indigenous health, upskill, & network with a variety of insightful and capable health professionals who dedicate their work to these regions.

Club RHINO (Rural Health in the Northern Outback) at James Cook University (JCU) aims to inspire health students to serve Australia's diverse rural populations and foster a love for the unique natural landscapes in which they learn and practice. The club offers a variety of academic, cultural, sporting, and social events, showcasing the benefits of rural work while having fun. Connect with us on our social pages or meet our friendly members to learn more!

Hope4Health serves Griffith Uni and UniSC. Our club organises local, rural, Indigenous, and international awareness, and fundraising activities including major corporate events, guest speaker seminars, rural clinical skills trips, rural high school visits, teddy bear hospitals, and much more.

TROHPIQ (Towards Rural and Outback Health Professionals in Queensland) is south-east Queensland's rural health club dedicated to helping medical, nursing, dentistry and allied health students experience the unique career and lifestyle opportunities to be found in regional, rural, and remote medicine. The club serves students at UQ, QUT, ACU, USQ, and CQU with social events, scholarships, seminars, and training days.
